

Dirty

A place where I feel uncomfortable would be at a person's house that is really dirty. I will admit that I keep my room clean, only once in awhile does it really get dusty or not vacuumed. One particular sleep over that I went to, my white socks ^{were} black when I got up in the morning. That was only from walking around a carpeted basement floor. The kid's room was covered with clothes (all over the place). There were crumbs on the floor and food wrappers in the corner. The kid went to get (to get) something out of his closet and there were stacks of clothes and papers on top of a desk, that you could barely see. I went to go to sleep on the couch and I found a beer bottle halfway sticking out from the bottom of the couch. There were also crumbs and other things on the floor. When I got up in the morning I wanted to take a shower, but then I had second thoughts about what their shower might look like.

The night before we went to see a movie and the kid wore Dockers and a collared shirt. The following morning he put the same dockers back on. I wondered if he ever had any of his clothes washed.

I keep my room pretty clean; on an average I dust and vacuum my room once a week. My room is the place that I feel the most comfortable. I spend a lot of time in my room. I do my homework; I talk on the phone, sleep, and just rest. I enjoy spending time in my room.
